A miser melted down his hoard of gold into a single lump which he then secretly buried in a field. Every day he went to look at it and would spend hours gloating over it. But one of his servants discovered his secret and came by night and stold the gold. The miser was inconsolable. One day a friend of his said: 'Don't take it so badly. Just put a brick in the hole and take a look at it every day. You won't be any worse off than before, for even when you had the gold you never used it'. We all bury some talent or gift which we won't use or develop. It is not only the man with one talent who buries it, but people who have been given five or ten talents. Instead of reaping double, they become falsely cautious or just plain lazy and bury their talents. And what is buried is of no earthly use to anyone.
